

ESSENTIAL CIVIL WAR CURRICULUM

Susan Deily-Swearingen (University of New Hampshire) is a Doctoral Candidate completing a dissertation titled Rebel Rebels: Race, Resistance, and Remembrance in the Free State of Winston. She has presented her research at multiple conference venues including the Conference of the Southern Historical Association (Atlanta), The Roosevelt Institute for American Studies (Middleburg, Netherlands), and two conferences hosted by Virginia Technical University (Blacksburg, and Arlington VA). Additionally, she has spent well over a decade as a writer and scholar and her work includes over twenty pieces written as an editorial blogger for The Huffington Post. In addition to teaching in the American History Department at the University of New Hampshire, for which she was awarded the 2018 prize for Excellence in Teaching, Susan has recently accepted a post as book review editor for H-CivWar.